

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a method for determining a type of option spread based upon options received from an input device. The method comprises receiving a sequence of options, comparing each option with each other option, assigning a quantity for each option, and determining a type of option spread based upon the comparison of each 5 option with each other option and the assigned quantity of each option.